

Peace of Mind.
Proven Results.

Demand a Certified Radon Test.

Our tests ensure that the radon in your new home is at an acceptable level. Only inspectors who use Radalink radon measurement equipment can provide a written warranty and can guarantee that the radon levels are under the EPA's recommended action level.

Don't let anyone sell you a home without knowing the radon level.

Your health and the health of your family are too important to take chances with anything other than a Certified Radon Report. The EPA, The Surgeon General, and The American Cancer Society all recommend that every home be tested for radon. Nearly 21,000 people per year die with radon related lung cancer. However, today most home buyers are still unaware of the danger. Fewer homes are being tested year after year as home sellers attempt to cut costs. While elevated levels of radon can be a serious problem, there is a simple solution to finding peace of mind in your new home purchase. Insist that your home comes with a Radalink Certified Radon Report from your home inspector.
